(c) Tea from Ruhuna Agro-climatic region of Sri Lanka

Sri Lanka, (formerly Ceylon) is an island of 65,610 sq.km., located between 5°55'-9°51' North of the Equator, ascending from sea level to approximately 2400 meters. The average temperature in the country varies from around 28° C in low lands to around 15° C in the high elevation. The first commercial tea plantation was established in Sri Lanka in 1867 and tea is grown in three different elevations from sea level as Low grown Ceylon Tea, Medium grown Ceylon Tea and High grown Ceylon Tea.

The Ruhuna Agro-climatic region, falls under the low grown elevation, is situated in the Southern Sri Lanka covering Administrative Districts of Kalutara, Galle and Matara (Maps enclosed). Since the turn of the 20th century, tea has been cultivated and grown in the tea gardens and manufactured in tea factories geographically located in the Ruhuna Agro-climatic region, from sea level to around 2000 feet (600 meters), comprising vast sub regions from coastal plains to Southern edge of Sinharaja Rain Forest.

(d) The Southern part of the country has an exclusive soil character that gives blackness to the leaves as well as strength and character to the cup. The Ruhuna Teas are typically known for their stylish leaf appearance and large particle size. Ruhuna tea is deep red in colour and is full bodied and has a strong distinctive taste. Ruhuna tea is predominantly hand picked by experienced workers who select only the tender-most leaves and bud. Ruhuna tea enjoys both domestic and international reputation for unique quality, character and leaf appearance that are associated with its production in the region.
